The Social Welfare Cell of the Institute conducted a significant outreach program in Haran Gaon Village, focusing on personal hygiene and gynecological health. For the second consecutive year, the Cell distributed sanitary napkins to 50 girls in the village, providing each with a pack designed to last a year. This initiative aims to improve menstrual hygiene management among the girls and raise awareness about gynecological health.

Principal Dr. Sanjay Kshirsagar, along with staff members, actively encouraged and motivated the students involved in this activity. The distribution event saw enthusiastic participation from Second Year B. Pharm students, who contributed to the success of the initiative. The program not only provided essential hygiene products but also empowered the girls with knowledge and awareness about maintaining their health.
